TELEGRAM. -Quite a discussion has been indulged in by the newspapers of this country and England as to the propriety of employing the term teleam to signify a telegraphic dispatch. It is contended that it ranks in the same class as the words anagram, epigram, &c., denoting what is written, the termination aph indicating the mode of writing. The Loudon Times very complacently recommends the adoption of the term, which the English papers claim was recently invented by a clerk in a Goverzment office. Since its use has been sanctioned by such high authority on the other side of the ocean, it will probably be permanently incorporated in the language, but it is not of English origin. The Philadelphia Sunday Dispatch fixes the paternity of the word upon Col. J. S. Wallace, ex-editor of the Philadelphia Sun, and at present manager of the Theater in this city. The Dispatch says: " 'Telegram' was brought forward in this country shortly after the lines of telegraph were completed between Washington and New York. Col. J. S. Wallace attempted to render it fashionable by frequent use in the Daily Sun some seven or eight years ago, but he failed in his attempt to make it popular." At any rate the word dispenses with circumlocation, and is besides classically correct.

CHARACTERISTIC.—One of our exchanges gives the following account of a "capital" expedient practiced by the sharp ones in Kansas: "In getting up a bank at Lecompton, last summer, it was necessary, according to the charter, to exhibit $50,000 cash capital, as actually paid. The parties accordingly provided themselves with $2,000, in two bags, and presented themselves before the Governor, to make the required exhibition. As one of the bags was counted out, it was taken away and the other presented, this operation being continued until each had passed in review twenty times, to the entire satisfaction of the innocent Governor. It is supposed that this trick was learned from their experience in vot-

Execution in Mobile.-We learn from the Mobile papers that Joe Pigeon, recently convicted of the murder of a cabman, was hung in that city on Friday week. The Advertiser states that the mur derer, just previous to his death, confessed his crime and the justness of his punishment.

RIVER AND STEAMBOAT MATTERS;

The river was falling slowly yesterday with about 7 feet 9 inches water in the canal. The weather has again turned very cold. We received no further particulars of the burning

Disasters on the Alabama River .- The following paragraphs we copy from our Mobile exchanges of last Tuesday:

Steamer Enterprise Sunk.—From the passengers on the steamer Advance, in from Drake's Landing yesterday, with 536 bales of cotton and a number of passengers, we learn the steamer Enterprise snagged and sunk on Turkey Shoals on Saturday, with about 300 bales cotton. The cotton, doubtless, will be saved; the Enterprise, it is thought, will be a total saved; the Enterprise, it is thought, loss.

Another Accident.—The larboard guard of steamer Eclipse gave way at about 11 o'clock Sunday morning, when she was about one mile below Choctaw Bluff, on her way down, and 34 bales of cotton and five negroes, the property of a negro trader on board, weut into the river. Two of the negroes were drowned—the others were saved.

How the President of the Bank of Penn-SYLVANIA KEPT ITS ACCOUNTS .- The New York Tribune has an interesting letter from a Philadelphia correspondent, showing the way in which Thos. Allibone, the President of the Bank of Pennsylvania managed to hide his rascality and the banks insolvency from the Directors. He says:

vency from the Directors. He says:

Immediately after his departure the Directors succeeded in a certaining the cause of the ruin. They were thunderstruck at the deliberate, systematic, skillful and long-continued fulsification of the books and accounts. Any Board of Directors in the world would have been deceived by the skillful figuring of this man, even in the absence of that entire confidence which they placed in his integrity. A private loan book, kept in the private desk of the President, and now first brought to the knowledge of the Board, reveals astounding facts. Men who never borrowed a dollar are here charged as being large debtors to the bank. Others who had borrowed, on being sent for and payment demanded, produce evidence that they have refunded the loans. Envelopes, indorsed as containing valuable seemi-Envelopes, indorsed as containing valuable seemities, on being opened are found to have had the securities abstracted, and mere memeranda, technically known as "ghosts," occupying their places. Large transactions made without the knowledge of the Board, are detected with the brokers, and it is confidently believed that from these quarters many as Board, are detected with the brokers, and it is confidently believed that from these quarters many assets may be recovered for the bank. Other transactions, not proper for publication now, have been laid bare, and the Directors having made oath that the President has absconded from the country with design to defraud his creditors, have attached his large property for the benefit of the bank. At this moment a commission of three experts, appointed by the Governor under the late Relief Law, are engaged in ascertaining the true condition of the assets. Vague hopes are entertained that enough may be recovered from the wreck to enable the bank to go on and preserve its valuable charter, which has just been extended twenty years. Already the stock is been extended twenty years. Already the stock is on the list of fancies, and having gone down from $112 to $6, now vibrates up to $10.

Washington, Nov. 19. I learn from authentic sources that the free State "party" in Kansas are organizing a resistance, by force, to the provisional government, or any government which may be instituted under the constitution ment which may be instituted under the constitution framed by the constitutional convention, and that they will not recognize that constitution in any way. They will not probably vote upon the question submitted—to-wit, constitution with and constitution without slavery. REMEDIES FOR GLANDERS IN HORSES, A COL respondent of the Cotton Planter asks for a remedy for Glanders, and receives the following from the for Glanders, and receives the following from the Ohio Cultivator:

I am aware that even in suggesting a remedy for this loathsome and dangerous malady, which from the days of Hippocrates, of Cos, twenty-three hundred years ago, to the present time, has bid defiance to the skill of the Veterinarian, I subject myself to the eneers of the learned. Still, I am willing to encounter even this, if I may be the instrument of alleviating the suffering of the horse.

Take of the Iodide of Potassium one drachm, and of Sulphate of Copper (Blue Stone) two drachms, levigate or pulverize them, and add them together, and they form the Diniodide of Copper (mix these ingredients only as you want to use them). Then with a little flour make into one or two balls or pills, raise your horse's head at you would to drench him, and with your left hand draw his tongue gently out, put the ball into a large spoon, and with your right hand pass it as far down his throat as practicable, let his tongue go, and he is compelled to swallow it. This should be given night and morning, till the symptoms of Glanders disappear. I have tested this remedy sufficiently to be aatisfied that, if administered in the early stage of the disease, It will cure within ten or fifteen days. Were I going to treat a case of Glanders, I would feed my hoose on mashes (that is, boiling hot water poured over oats and bran, or cut fodder or hay and meal, and covered till cool), for at least two days. Then I would give six drachms of aloes, given in a ball, and when it had ceased operating, I would commence with one and a half drachm of Diniodide of Copper, which would be a half drachm of Iodide of Potassium and a drachm of Blue Stone, night and morning, increasing a quarter of a drachm each day, till with one and a hair dracing of Diniodide of Copper, which would be a half drachm of Iodide of Potassium and a drachm of Blue Stone, night and morning, increasing a quarter of a drachm each day, till I got up to three drachms, feeding principally upon green food, if to be had, and if not, upon mashes, giving but little if any corn.

Another correspondent gives the following as the best remedy, and this is the medicine we have been in the habit of using:

Being an old doctor, "whose sands have almost run out," we have investigated the disease of Glanders in horses and men. And after much experience, we have long since settled down on the grand Panacea. It is powder and one blue pill. Take one tablespoonfull of Dupont's best rifle power, and put it into the mouth of a good musket, and ram down the paper on the top of it, then take one blue pill of lead of an ounce or less in weight, and ram home on top of that, and then go to the patient, he the stable, and go through the military manual of firing; but be sure to kill the horse, and burn him and the stable, bridles, and every thing that has come in consecutive him. stable, bridles, and every thing that has come in contact with him. Though if the stable is a very valuable one, and has not been much contaminated, at many be saved, by thorough cleaning, scraping, and washing with chloride of lime, and then fumigated with chlorine gas.

GAPES IN YOUNG TURKIES .- A correspondent of the Country Gentleman, writing from Racine, Wisconsin, says:

In No. 235 of your paper, dated July 2, some one inquires for a cure for gapes in turkeys. The following I have found an effectual remedy: Give a few drops of sweet or lamp oil, and follow with a strong solution of alum. Repeat the dose if necessary sary.

Fool for Fouls.—Fowls are, of all birds, the most easy to feed. Every alimentary substance agrees with them, even when buried in manure; nothing is lost to them; they are seen the whole day long incessautly busied in scratching, picking up a living. In well-fed fowls the difference will be seen, not only in the size and flesh of the fowls, but in the weight and goodness of the eggs; two of which go farther in domestic nses than three from hens poorly fed or half starred. ly fed or half starved.

It is customary to throw to the fowls in a poultry-yard, once or twice a day, a quantity of grain, generally corn, and somewhat less than that which they would consume if they had an abundance. Fowls, however, are more easily satisfied than might be supposed from the greedy voracity which they exhibit when they are fed from the hand. It is well known that, as a general rale, large animals consume more than small ones. There is as much difference in the quantity of food consumed by individual fowls as there is in animals. It has been found by careful experiments that the sorts of food most easily digested by fowls are those of which they eat the greatest quantity. They evidently become soonest tired of and are least partial to rye.

It has also been found that there is considerable ecenoray in feeding wheat, corn, and barley, well bolled, as the grain is thus increased in bulk at least one-fourth, and the same bulk seems to satisfy them; but there is no saving by boiling outs, buckwheat, or rye.—American Powterer's Companion.

CLOVERPORT, Ky., Nov. 12, 1857. GENTLEMEN: We send you a sample of our coal oil liniment, seeing that you manifest some interest in ascertaining a remedy for a disease of the hog known as hog cholera; and, as our coal oil liniment has been used with complete success in this vicinity as a preventive and also as a cure for the disease, we think it would be well, for the benefit of farmers and others engaged in hog raising, to have this medicine thoroughly tested. We are willing to furnish to any prerson connectent to make the test an amount of linerate and the series of the s thoroughly tested. We are willing to furnish to any person competent to make the test an amount of liniment sufficient for that purpose, free of charge, and at any point or place they may desire it at. To use as a preventive the liniment should be mixed with corn, one bottle (such as we send you) to one peck of corn; this amount should be fed to twelve or fifteen hogs, two or three times a week. We have not known any hegs fed in this way more than two weeks, and have heard of no hogs taking the disease after being so fed. After hogs have refused to eat, one ounce of the liniment, poured into them, has in most cases effected a cure.

Hoping we do not presume too much in address-

Hoping we do not presume too much in address-ing you upon this subject, we remain yours, truly, MILLER & GOFF.

We have received with the above one dozen bottles of the liniment, which we will distribute to farmers in this vicinity who may have the disease among their hogs. It is certainly worthy of a trial.

Good Plan of Shoeing Horses.—II. Hallen, V. S. of the Inniskillen dragoons, having for upwards of twenty years taken great interest in the subject of shoeing horses, offers the following remarks, which appear in the Veterinarian:

To prepare the fore foot for a shoe, a level ground surface is made by a drawing knife and rasp, taking off the usual quantity of horn which would be worn away at the ground surface of the crust. At the toe there is a concavity made for the reception of the foot surface of the shoe at this part, caused by the turning up of the shoe. The heels are not what is generally termed opened by the drawing knife, neither is there a particle of the outside crust, sole, or frog removed.

knife, neither is there a particle of the outside crust, sole, or frog removed.

The form of the Shoe.—This is made flat on the foot surface, and concave on the ground surface throughout, excepting at the toe, which part is turned up so as to have the form (inferiorly) of a shoe worn some time. No clip at the toe or any part of the shoe. The nail holes are countersunk; the are used, three on the outside and two on the inside, placed so as to retain the shoe securely on the foot, and, at the same time, to interfere as little as possible with the elasticity of the horn.

Fitting the Shoe to the Foot.—Care is requisite to have an equal beating throughout on the ground surface of the crust, and the shoe not to project in the slightest degree (outward) in any part; the heels of the shoe to terminate evenly with the foot.

[From the New Englan | Farmer.] SMALL POTATO EXPERIMENT.

SMALL POTATO EXPERIMENT.

Mr. Editor: It is considered a point beyond dispute that fully matured seeds of all kinds are better and more certain to produce good results than seeds not fully matured. Is this the fact? Is there not a point short of full maturity, at which, if seed be gathered, better results may be obtained than from fully matured seeds? There are some facts that would seem to favor such an hypothesis. Mr. A informs me that last year he obtained a new variety of sweet corn, but at so late a date that he had but little hope, if he planted that susson, he should be able to test its value; he planted the the frost eame while the corn was yet "in milk." Unwilling to lose the seed, he gathered a few ears, dried them in the sun, and this spring planted them; much to his surprise every keruel came up, and he had as fine a field of corn as he ever saw—early, large, and full.

Mr. B., celebrated here for his fine and very early sweet corn, always gathers his corn for seed while it is "in milk," and never fails to have good crops.

For many years I have been in the habit of look-while it is "in mink, and never tains to be corops.

For many years I have been in the habit of looking over agricultural papers, and have noticed the various statements made in relation to large and small potatoes, and the very dissimilar results of experiments made with them. It occurred to me that the size of the potato had less to do with the success of the experiment than the state of moturity to which it had arrived, and that it was only from unmatured seed that satisfactory results had been obtained, when a small potato experiment had resulted favorably.

unmatured seed that satisfactory results had been obtained, when a small potato experiment had resulted favorably.

To test this, on the 28th of July, 1856, I planted 20 to 30 kills of potatoes, with such seed of the crop of 1856 as could be found in the cellar at so late a date. The seed was very poor, very small, and of various kinds: Dovers, Danvers Seedlings, Long Reds, Chenangoes, and English Whites; little manure was put in each hill—and they were hoed once. About the 10th of October they were ding, and the product was nine pounds of very small unripe potatoes, from the size of a hickory nut to the size of a pea. [If one wishes to judge of the size, let them first select about 150 potaties of the size of a hickory nut, and then 650 others so small that the whole 800 potatoes shall weigh but nine pounds.] These were carefully put aside, and at the usual time this spring were planted; the soil is light, sandy loam; potatoes had been grown on the same spot for two years previous, manure spread on, and plowed in; no extra manure, and no extra labor on account of the experiment. The laud measured 30 by 40 feet, and the potatoes were planted so as to make 100 to 200 hills—an average of four potatoes being put in each hill. The man who planted them was very unwilling to do it. "Tis the most foolish experiment I ever heard of, planting such potatoes as these, and expecting to get any thing from them; 'tisa waste of time as well as land; you had better throw them away, and plant something that will come to something. You won't get so many as you plant, and these ha'nt good for nothing." was his observation, when told to plant them. The work was done, however, the potatoes grew, matured, and were due the last of September. The result was as follows: when told to plant them. The work was done, how-ever, the potatoes grew, matured, and were dug the last of September. The result was as follows: I could not find enough potatoes of the size plant-ed to make up the amount used for seed, but put in every field; in this patch one, and one only, was found, and that a Dover. The kinds that did best were Dovers and Long Red. Ten potatoes taken without particular selection from among the largest, weighed 7% pounds, or %4 pounds each. Such is the result of my experiment. If you think it of any value it is at your service. Very respectfully, ROB'T RHODES. Fairmount, Pawtuxet, R. I., October, 1857.

Good sized planting potatoes, such as are us-

PRESERVING TENDER PLANTS DURING WINTER.

Any effective plan for the preservation of decorative plants in our Northern States is of the first imporplants in our Northern States is of the list happortance, as thereby we are enabled to enjoy luxuries common to more favored climes.

All countries subject to such biting winters are sure to have plans for the furtherance of this object. Our hot-houses, green-houses, vineries, at dail aimilar arrangements are but the means to the some ends. Very possibly without all these luxuries are existence would be possible; but strip poor humanity of these luxuries and you at once there

So long ago as 1826, a method of protecting tender plants was published in the "Fransactions of the Society for the Advancement of Gardening in the Royal Prussian States," that might very likely be adopted here with very good results, especially for the protection of choice rose bushes, rhododendrons, and other plants:

"Stakes are fixed round the plants, and willow 'Stakes are fixed round the plants, and willow

THE GOVERNOR IN THE INDIAN TERRITORY .-The first lawful Governor has been installed in office in the Indian Territory west of Arkansas. His name | yard, and 37 cents for guttering. is Alfred Wade, and he is the first Governor of the Choctaw nation under their republican constitution. From a letter describing the inaugnration, which is published in the Fort Smith Herald, it seems that the ceremony took place at the capital in presence of a large concourse of people and the Scuate and House of Representatives, as also of the United States sgent, General D. H. Cooper. The oath of office was repeated in both English and Choctaw. It was administered by Judge Ashley Burns, of the Supreme Court. By the same letter we also learn that the other national officers had been duly qualified and entered upon the duties of their posts, as follows: Secretary, Joseph A. Hall; Anditor, William B. Pitchlynn; Treasurer, John Page; Attorney, Coleman Cole. Subsequently the Legislature organized by electing the Hon. Tandy Walker, Presilent of the Senate, and the Hon. Wm. Roebuck, Speaker of the House, and proceeded to prepare and enact a complete set of laws. The Cherokees have an executive officer who is called Principal Chief. What led to the present reorganization of the Choctaws we are not informed. They occupy the sonthernmest part of the Indian territory, bordering Texas and Arkansas. The lied river, which is their southern borrdary, is well settled in Texas. As the Indians refute to unite together in one common orgazization, and protested against a proposition made in Congress to that effect, perhaps the idea may be entertained of separating the northern part of Texas between the 83d parallel and Red River, and uniting it with the Chectaw nation, so as to form a State. There is now population enough in that region to seenre admission into the Union. As yet, however, there has been no open movement to that effect, though probably the ensuing session of Congress may bring it to light among the other territorial projects now in agitation.

lean from the New York Tribune that Mr. E. F. Barres of that city has now in successful operation a new telegraphic machine. Mr. Barnes, in connection with Mr. Zook, brought out a machine in this city tome years ago, which was declared an infringement on the Morse patent. We are glad that Mr. B. has at last succeeded in perfecting an instrument which is entirely of his own inventiou. The peculiarities of this new patent are several, among which may be named the following: 1st. It requires no skill to use it, and any person can operate with it on the first trial correctly and satisfactorily. 2d. It writes in alphabetical characters, though worked by a single person with case and rapidity. 3d. The machinery is very simple and very strong, and not at all liable to get out of order. 4th. It is not deranged by thunder-storms, but can be worked with equal fidelity in all weathers. 5th. Being very simple, it is very inexpensive.

The difficulties arising from atmospheric electrical disturbances are removed by the employment in the main telegraphic circuit of a vessel of acidulated water, through which the wire passes, having rome attachments by which the atmospheric electric'ty is drawn from the wire and dissipated into the atmosphere again. In that portion of Barnes's telegraph denominated the mutator, which is in the main telegraphie circuit, there is such a combination with a permanent electro-magnet, that the greatest of all difficulties in stormy weather, that of adjusting the magnet, is removed, as the mutator is self-adjusting to an almost entire extent, and a line of telegraph can be successfully operated by it; use when all other magnets are unmanageable.

The inventor expects that these instruments, in addition to the ordinary employment, will be extensively used by newspaper offices, merchants, and brokers, as they require no skid in handling and cost but little. Every man his own telegrapher!

THE STEAMSHIP ADRIATIC. - This new steamship of the Collins line sailed from New York for Liverpool, on her first voyage, on Monday last. The following general description of her machinery and power, dimensions and capacity, and cost is interest-

The machinery of the Adriatic consists of two of the largest oscillating engines that have ever been remote ted: they are of the technical horse-power of 1,500, but in reality they are equal to 2,800 or 3,000. There are eight principal toilers, each with furnaces ranged side by eide, so that the whole number of furnaces is forty-eight. Besides there there are two stre heights to be used whom desired. her of furnaces is forty-eight. Besides there there are two extra boilers to be used when desired. The vessel will carry, for the supply of her boilers during a single passage across the Atlantic, from 1,200 to 1,500 tors of coal. She is supplied with patent condensers, the cold water running through 12,000 circulating copper ripes, condensing the steam in its cource, saving, as it is said, nearly $75,000 per annum in fuel and wear and tear when the ship is running. The pisten rods are fifteen inches in diameter, and the shaft twenty inches in diameter, of solid ning. The pisten rods are litteen inches in diameter, and the shaft twenty inches in diamater, of solid wrought iron. The fursaces require from lifty to sixly firemen and coal passers, and no less than six engineers will be required to attend the engines. The wheels are each forty feet in diamater and twelve feet face, and have a dip of from eight to size feet.

In bulk the Adriatic is 354 feet in length, or nine feet longer than the United States frigate Niagara; fifty feet bread, and thirty-three feet two inches in depth. She measures 5,900 tons, or 700 tons more than the Ningara; 806 nore than the Vanderbill; and 2,900 mere than the Atlantic! She has accommend the state of the three depths of the state of the modations for alon: four hundred passengers, three bundred of them being first-class.

The cost of this superb ship, it is said, has been mearly a million of dollars.

SUBMARINE RAILWAY EXPLORATION IN MAIL-The exploration of the two tracks of ways, of the submanine railroad, at Hunter's Point, was made on Mouday, in Mailefert's new bell, with entire success. The object of the exploration was to ascertain whether the two large fron sheaves, placed upon the track two months ago, were in working order. To ascertain this, the Brostatic Inbular Diving Bell was floated over the sheaves in eighteen feet water, and lowered by allowing the air to escape from the outer shell. The experiment was witnessed by a number of engineers and divers, with great interest. As soon as the bell had been lowered, the men entered it by the tube, the upper portion of which remianed above the surface, and proceeded with their work. When they came up, they said the light admined through the tube enabled them to see clearly what was below, and to do their work. What surprised those on shore most was their announcement that they heard what was said on shore, 150 feet distant. The divers remained below five hours, when they came out to dine, and then returned and remained five hours longer cutting and bring timbers. Having fluished their work, they came up again, and spoke in high terms of the success of the experiment. While in it, the operator has at all times an opening, through valved man-holes in the tube, to above the surface, to which he can get out without external assistance, or without moving the bell. The area of the bell used is 33 feet at the byton, which affords sufficient working space for four men at a time.—N. Y. Times. cess. The Hard Times and the Herse Market -Hard times have very sensibly affected the horse market; and those who, a few months since, bought on a speculation, find themselves unable to sell without a inous discount from original cost, if at all; while to keep them is no less ruinous than to sell. The New York Evening Post says that at the semiweekly horse auction held in Crosty street, horses which in ordinary times would be held at $100 or $150 each, were struck down at $20 or $50, and one animal, capable of much service on a farm or before a dray, was struck off at $3.

A Tender Reproof.—A very little loy had one day done wrong, and was sent, after parental correction, to ask in secret the forgiveness of his Heavenly Father. His offence had been passion. Anxious to hear what he would say, his mother followed to the door of his room. In lisping accents she heard him ask to be made better, never to be augry again; and then, with childlike simplicity, he added, "Lord, make ma's temper better too."

Scientific authorities are beginning to doubt the permanence of suspension bridges. The recent fall of two in Canada, one at the Montmorencie Falls and the other at the Desjardius Canal. has led to investigations, which indicate that the incessant vibratory movements to which the iron supports are subjected, together with the action of the elements, cause a granulation and loss of tenacity in the iron wire which must in the end destroy its supporting power. If the results are reliable, the fall of any power. If the results are reliable, the fall of any suspension bridge is only a question of time. It is to be hoped that the ablest scientific minds will probe the matter thoroughly.—Boston Watchman.

Manufacture of Sardines .- An Edinburgh paper says that large quantities of spratz are weekly sent to London from the east coast of Scotland to be mannfactured into sardines. Young herrings are also used for the same purpose.

Romantic .- Twenty-five years ago (in 1831), two brothers, named Wright, machinists, were working at Dayton, and one of them became attached to a young girl named Muntz, who was then living in the family of a Mr. Wm. Machib. The two brothers afterwards worked for Ross Winan & Co., of Baltimore, and finally became interested in the enormous contracts of that firm for stocking the St. Petersburg and Moscow railway, went out there and both became very rich. Ten years ago the brother who was interested in Miss Muntz died in London, leaving her by his will $10,000. Miss Muntz left Dayton for Preble county years ago, and, though she has been advertised for, has not come forward to claim the legacy. The surviving brother was at Dayton last week, and left there for Eaton, hoping to hear some tidings of her.

THE RICHEST MAN IN ENGLAND -He is the Marquis of Westminster. Ilis wealth is estimated at £21,000,000 sterling, or $105,000,000, and his annual income at £700,000, How he lecame so immensely rich is explained by Shelton Mackenzie, the well-informed literary editor of the Philadel-

Some people may desire to know how the Marquis of Westminster comes to possess this immense property, equal to the fabulous wealth of the Count De Monte Christo. More than half of it has accrued within the last lifty years. The Marquisate of Westminster is a modern creation, dating no further back than the time of the Reform Bill, when Earl Grey rewarded many of his political supporters with new peerages, and with advancements in degree.

supporters with new peerages, and with advancements in degree.

Thus the Earl of Grosvenor was changed into the most noble the Marquis of Westminster," and originally inherited, with his father's Earldom, the estates—at that time chiefly consisting of land in Cheshire and Dorsetshire. But he also was owner of a large tract of land in Westminster, stretching from the Houses of Parliament to Chelsea—land which originally belonged to the Crown, and was from the Houses of Parliament to Chelsea—land which originally belonged to the Crown, and was sold to the Grosvenor family for a trifle. By degrees, as Loudon increased, particularly syneading to the West, as most great cities do, this land, swampy and barren as it was, came into request for building purposes. George the Fourth, ashamed of such a residence as St. James's Palace (which originally was an hospital, and locks like one to this day), and tired of Carlton House, obtained authorization from Parliament to build apother Palace on the sight of Parliament to build another Palace on the sight of Buckingham House, in Pimlico, formerly the pro-perty of his mother, Queen Charlotte. In the center of a swamp, and only a few feet above the level of the Thames from which it is not far distant, this was, perhaps, the very worst site in London for a dwelling.

But upon it arose the present Buckingham Palace, the town residence of Queen Victoria, around which, the town residence of Queen Victoria, around which, with due rapidity, soon accumulated new squares and streets, the habitations of the rich and fashionable people of the West End. Many of these squares and streets, consisting of palatial houses, were built on the Grosvenor ground, but not with the Grosvenor money. The London practice is to lease out the building lots, at so much annual ground rent, for the teuant to build the houses according to certain architectural plans supplied by the ground landlord, so as to secure uniformity of appearance and con-

Of course, as each of these honses comes back to the landlord, the grandson of the present Manquis of Westminster, who may be living when these reversions come into operation, will find his London income marvellously augmented—for if the rent for the mere ground of a fashionable dwelling in "Belgravia," (so called because the Marquis is also Baron Belgrave,) be estimated at £300 a year, the dwelling itself, when it falls back, literally for nothing, as part of the Grosvenor estate, will be worth ten times as much. Whoever shall be Marquis of Westminster in the year 1900, may estimate his London property at not less than £1,060,000 to £1,500, Westminster in the year 1900, may estimate his London property at not less than £1,000,000 to £1,500,000 per annum. A counfortable income for one man—unless, indeed, by that lime the artificial distinctions of rank shall have become things of the past—to be philosophically contemplated by Mr. Macaulay's Austratian citizen, as he sits on the ruins of St. Paul's, calmly smoking his pipe, and musing on the decay of great empires.

[From the Boston Ledger, Nov. 17.] A COLORED WOODMAN CASE.—A very pretty and charming English weman came to this country not long since, with her husband. Being both of very industrious habits the man soon obtained a situation as conchman, which position he now fills very faithfully and satisfactorily, and is, in his own humble way, a very worthy, honest man. His wife, wishing undoubtedly to assist in maintaining the family, hired a small shop in the neighborhood of Garden street, and established herself in business as a milliner and dress maker; and being a woman of excellent taste, rather engaging and pleasant withal, soon commanded a pretty good share of custom. But, unfortunately, parhaps, her shop was located in close proximity to a large building inhabited by a community of colored persons, with whom she

s curbecame on very friendly terms,

Helping a hand-ome young Among the aforesaid colored people was a robe heavy-built, amut-favored darkey, in whom Englishwe man soon seemed to take a very great in-terest—in fact a very deep interest—so much so that a team which he is employed to drive was often seen a team which he is employed to drive was often seen in front of the charming milliner's shop door. Enpassan', we will here remark, our fair Englishwoman practiced what she preached, and became a communicant at the colored church in West Center street, where she was wont to attend regularly.

The talk at last grew so loud as to reach the ears of the shepherd, of whose flock she was supposed to be one of the whitest lambs. Accordingly the reverend man took frequent observations, and, becoming satisfied that the weman was faithless to her husband, informed him of the fact. The breaking of such intelligence to him aroused all the John Bull in its original punity—that his wife should get up a lusson with a buck nigger—that the mother of his two children should be the aport of a greasy darkey—was altogether too much for his patient spirit. To crown the whole, Sister—has been excommunicated from the colored church, of which she was former, y a bright and shining light, on account of "errors not consistent with a religious life."

[For the Evening Builetin.] RELIEF FOR THE SUFFERING.

MESSES. EDITORS: I noticed in a city paper of vesterday a very valuable suggestion, which I would like to see brought to the notice of your many benevolent readers; it is of great importance to those among us who are suffering from the rigors of the winter—who are without work, and destitute of fuel and clothing in this bitterly cold weather, and who are not even supplied with sufficient food. What allude to, is the suggestion, that, on Thankspiving allude to, is the suggestion, that, ou Thank-giving Day, when all our churches will be thrown open for the purpose of thanking God fer Ilis many mercies and blessings to us, a collection be taken up for the relief of those who are suffering from want of food, fuel, and clothing. How appropriate to the occasion! I hope that the idea will commend itself to all who I hope that the idea will commerch itself to all who feel thankful to God for his many kindnesses to them, who are warmly lodged and clothed and well fed, and I feel sure that they will give heartily and abundantly to this good object, remembering that many who now suffer are able and willing and anxious to work, but cannot get employment wherewith to provide the necessaries of life.

A SYMPATHIZER WITH THE SUFFERERS.

A SINGULAR CASE.—The following tough story comes to us from a correspondent, and is apparently well authenticated:

well authenticated:

A young man named Ansel Bowen, living in the village of Westerly, was passing along the road into the village on the 29th of October, about midday, and suddenly he experienced an indescribable sensation. He lost first his sight, and then his speech, and finelly his ser se of hearing. He remained confounded in the middle of the road, knowing not which way to turn, and was found soon after by one of his acquaintances, who tried to arouse him, but which way to turn, and was found soon after by one of his acquaintances, who tried to arouse him, but without effect. Various methods were practiced, such as firing pistols and making loud noises close to him, but he did not notice them. He was taken home and fed as one would feed a child. Thus he continued up till Sunday, Nov. 15. As the family were about to attend church, Bowen's sight was restored to him in a manuer as quick and mysterious as that by which he had lost it. He went to church and carried a small slate on which he wrote; as soon as the unusic commenced he was seen to start; when the minister concluded the services Bowen began to read the writing on the slate aloud, to the infinite read the writing on the slate aloud, to the infinite surprise of all present. He returned to his home as well as he ever was.—Providence Journal, 17th.

The strange story from Westerly that we published yesterday is confirmed by people from the village. The man's name is Bourne. He has been dissipated, and while walking he fancied that he heard a voice bidding him go to church. He replied, that rather than obey the command, he would be deaf and dumb; whereupon his speech and sight and hearing failed him, and were restored in the way that we related yesterday. It was probably a case of strongly excited imagination, and perhaps, after his senses came back, he concluded to make a good thing out of it. He has been admitted into the church, and many people look upon it as a miracle that may be placed by the side of the conversion of St. Paul. We hope it will be as lasting.

IMPROVEMENT IN RAILROAD TRACKS AND CAR WITEELS.—Mr. Baxter Watson, of this city, has left at the Mercury office the model of an invention, for which a caveat has been some time filed in the of curves without friction.

It is well understood that, in turning a curve on a railroad, the inner track, or line of rails, being shorter than the outer, yet required to be traversed in the same time, no little friction takes place between the wheels and the rails, causing great wear and tear to both road and cars, lesides increasing the danger of accidents. Mr. Watson proposes to remedy this difficulty by laying the inner higher than the outer rail, and of a wider gange than on the straight part of the track; the car wheels, at the same time, being constructed of a conical form, or rather with a double track.

As the car reaches the commencement of the

As the car reaches the commencement of the curve the smaller tread of the inner wheel takes the elevated rail, which is laid on a broader gauge than the straight track by about the width of the rail. This wheel—which is to describe an arc of a smaller circle in the same time that the outer describes the corresponding arc of a larger one—thus becomes, for the time, smaller than the other in a ratio proportioned to the difference in the length of the curves, and so, though moving with the larger wheel, neither of them drags or is retarded by the wheel, neither of them drags or is retarded by the other. On leaving the curve for the straight track, the larger tread of the inner wheel falls at once upon the lower rail of the narrow gauge. Besides this peculiarity in construction, the axles are connected by diagonal rods in such a manner as to be always at right angles with the track, or two points towards the center of the curve. The power is claimed for this improvement of turning a curve of twenty-five feet radius, or passing down one side and returning up the other, of a street sixty feet wide.

Mr. Watson, the inventor, is already well known in Mobile as a skillful engineer and an Ingenious mechanic, and the model before us, constructed entirely by himself, is finished with all the neatness and accuracy of a piece of philosophical apparatus. It will be forwarded without delay to the Patent Office.—Mobile Mercury.

It was so consarned rocky that we had to get torty yoke of oxen to oue plow, we did, faith, and I held the plow more'n a week—I thought I should die. It e'en almost killed me, I vow. Why, one day I was holin', the plow hit a stump which measured just nine feet and a half through—hard and sound white oak; plow spilt it, and I was goir g 't aight through the stump, when I happened to think it might snap together again, so I threw my feet out, and no sooner done so than it snapped together, taking a amart hold of the seat of my pantaloons. Of course I was tight, but I held on to the plow handles, and though the teamsters did all they could, the team of eighty oxen couldn't tear my pantaloons nor cause me to let go my grip. At last, though, after letting the cattle breathe, they gave another strong pull together, and the old stump came out about the quickest. It had monstrous hard roots, too, let me tell you. My wife made the cloth fer them pantaloons, and I hain't worn any other since." The only reply made to the was—"I should have thought it would have come hard upon your suspenders." "Powerful hard."

The book for the times.
C. HAGAN & CO., Main st. Police Proceedings .- Tuesday, Nov. 24 .- Michael Milan and John O'Brien, stealing a quantity of feathers. Accused waived an examination and CFNTS' SØFT HATS-An extra srilele of Gents' Soft Felt Hats in stere and tot safe low by PRATHER, SMITH, & CO., 455 Matu st, gave bail in $500 each to answer.

Charles Sullivan, assault on Jerry McCormick. McCormick was struck on the head and has a dangerous wound. Bail in $200 to answer an assault. Aunie Botto, druukenness and disorderly conduct. Bail in $100 for two months.

Margaret Atkinson was arraigned for taking a few articles of apparel from Mr. Jackman, for whose family she had been working. Dismissed.

The most interesting case before the court was that of Ellen Casseday, a little girl about seven or eight years of age, who was to be bound to Mr. Prewitt. Her mother is a worthless and dissipated woman, who has been frequently before court and has been repeatedly in the Workhouse. Mr. Prewitt, some three or four weeks ago, found the child at a negro house, where she had been staying, her mother having neglected her. He took the child home, cleaned and dressed her, and made application to the court to have her bound to him, as her mother was not a proper person to attend to her. About the same time, the mother was before the court for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, and she gave her consent to let Mr. Prewitt bring up the child. Subsequently she went to Mr. Prewitt's house in a drunken state and was driven off.

Application was made to the Chancellor on behalf of the mother to compel Prewitt to give up the child, which was refused.

Benton. In 15 large octave volumes of about 750 two-column pages.

This work has now reached the fourth volume, and is giving great satisfaction among all classes. It will contain the wil down of Congress for seventy years, and will be an invaluable part of the history of the country. It is of national interest, and one of the most valuable compendiums for public and private libraries ever issued. The work realizes a desideratum long feit, and of all others, for the political history of the Government, most wanted. Its wide range of characters, each one speaking f-r himself and representing his own party, and its far stretch of time, make it of the greatest value to the nation. The ludexing is very complete, so that any name or subject desired may be found in either volume at once.

Terms.—The work is publishing exclusively by subscription, and the volumes are issued at lutervals of from 2 to 3 months. In cloth binding at $3; law sheep $3 50; half no rocco $4; half calf extra $4 50; each volume payable as delivered.

The agents for Louisville are CRUMP & WELSH, o28 3ch In the city court this morning, Mr. Rudd, counsel for Mrs. Casseday, moved that the child be bound to Mother Catherine or Capt. Rudd, in accordance with the desire of the mother. The court remarked that neither Mother Catherine or Capt. Rudd was present, and as the Chancellor had refused to take the child from Mr. Prewitt, this court did not consider it its province to give a different decision.

Mr. Rudd intimated to the court that the mother wished the child brought up a Catholic.

The court replied that it had nothing to do with religion. The only question for it to decide was whether the person who took charge of the child would bring her up properly. The child was then bound to Mr. l'rewitt.

We make but one remark on this case. Captain Rudd and Mother Catherine would probably never have heard of the child had she not been found and taken care of by Mr. Prewitt, who is in every way capable of bringing her up.

FROM NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21. The Herald continues to show up the horrible amount of crime here. It says to-day: It would not be a bad plan to place the Fourth Ward of this city under martial law. In addition to the murders in under martial law. In addition to the murders in William and Water sts., on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, last evening two persons were stabled in that ward. The first was a man named John Burns, who was assaulted by three ruffians and stabled in the face in three places. One of the gang was arrested, but the others escaped. About nine o'clock a dispute occurred in Water street between a Water stiller named. Thomas Price and a woman o'cleck a dispute occurred in Water street between a Welsh sailor named Thomas Price and a woman named Kate Burns, about an apple, which the former refused to pay for. Daring the altercation Price whipped out his sheath knife and plunged it into the left breast of a girl named Mary Ann Thompson, inflicting a severe wound. Fortunately a policeman happened to be in the neighborhood, who knocked Price down with his club, and then conveyed him to the station-house.

The investigation of the Water street murder was continued vesterday. Susan Dempsey, who was

The illustrions Gardner Furniss, here of the Woodman scandal, appears in print to day. He publishes a card, in which he says that Mr. Woodman knew of his "intimate acquaintance" with his wife, and that he (Furniss) supposed he approved of it! In speaking of his "interconrse with the Woodmans," he remarks: "That it was characterized by much that was imprudent, is only to confess what is obvious to every one; but it must be equally apparent ous to every one; but it must be equally apparent that I was allowed by Mr. W. to believe that my attitude was not misunderstood by him. He was a attitude was not mistanderstood by him. He was a man of business—thought of nothing else—cared for nothing else.

"His wife was gay, young, and fond of society. All the day and half the night he spent in his store. Without children, she was lonesome in her drawing-room, and he eucouraged me to suppose, as I always believed, that it was entirely agreeable to him that I should pass a great deal of my time in the society of his wife—thus enabling him to devote himself entirely to his affairs, and yet spare his wife the emui of a cheerless home. This is, no doubt, all very wrong; and so far as it is so, I am willing to bear without a murmur the censure of the world. And this is the extent of my offense down to the denoue-without a murmur the censure of the world. And this is the extent of my offense down to the denouement at the New York Hotel."

Furniss also defends his attempt to rescue Mrs. W. from the Flushing Asylum on the ground that her husband was wreaking vengeance on her, and he says he was willing to marry her in case a divorce from Mr. Woodman could be procured. He also hints that Mr. W. is a coward, and seems to want Mr. W. to challenge him.

Furniss, in short, proves himself a consummate scoundrel.

character of the heast itself, as I take it for granted they have not had an opportunity of learning all his phrenological developments or temperament.

The mule trade is one of the largest of Kentucky, and affords one of her chief sources of revenue. The increasing demand for them in the South, among the sugar and cotton planters (which is owing, no doubt, to the great number of farms annually being opened in that section), affords a very easy solution for the eagerness and extent to which stock growers launch into the trade, for it is a very heavy business. launch into the trade, for it is a very heavy business, requiring a great deal of capital. The mule is fed from wearing time (which is generally at the age of five or six months), to the full exteut of its capacity. ity to eat, and that too on oats and corn, together with hay and fodder. In lieu of the long food, soiling is usually adopted in the summer, as they are kept confined in a pound or paddoc, containing an acre or two of ground, which is usually partially shaded, in herds of one hundred or one hundred and acre or two of ground, which is usually partially shaded, in herds of one hundred or one hundred and fifty. In this way they are kept until the fall after they are two years old, receiving a sort of forcing, hot-house treatment. At this age they are taken to the southern market, not always by the feeders, but more generally by the speculator or "trader;" there they are sold to the planters entirely unbroken. The planters are too cautions to buy a broke mule, lest it should prove to be an antiquated, broken down beast, fattened np, and sold for a young one-as it is more difficult to judge of their ages than that of a horse. The external marks of time and service are not generally so apparent upon them. But it is a small job to break a mule. It is only necessary to have a sleady horse to work them with and a second hand to drive them an hour or two to keep him up, after which he is considered ready for any service that the farmer may require of him. He may kick once or twice, but is unlike the spirited horse, who when he commences is apt to kick himself out of the harness before he stops.

There was in this county, in the year 1855, 2000 mules; in '56 there were 2888; the number in this county at present I have no means of ascertaining, but suppose it is at least as great, perhaps greater than in any previous year. The probabilities are that all of these, or as many, were fed in this county each]; ear. The counties of Bourbon, Fayette, Clark, and Jessamine are engaged quite as extensively in the trade as this.

Besides the great number of mules fed annually in these counties, we supply New Orleans, New

Besides the great number of mules fed annually in these counties, we supply New Orleans, New York and other cities with an immense amount of beef, mutton, and bacon. These facts being considered, you may readily imagine that we must, of necessity, be a grain-growing people. Such is the fact. Yet so extensive is the mule business, and so great are the profits upon feeding, that those engaged in the trade can afford to give 40 cts. per bushel for corn, at least they say so, and cannot get it for less. In this portion of Kentucky, a lot of mules is almost considered a legal tender; no man is afraid to buy mules at a little less than he thinks they are worth if he has anything to feed them on, for he knows that some buyer will come along in few days and say him a small profit on the first cost and the and pay him a small profit on the first cost and the grain they have eaten. It is not unusual for a farmer to borrow money out of the banks on four or six months' time, to pay for a lot of mules to eat up his surplus of provender, knowing that it is more profitable to do so than to sell the surplus at

As a consequence of this great mania, if it might be so called, and which has now existed for several years, good horses have become comparatively saddle and harness horses commanding th most exhorbitant prices, the sports of the turf were in paerfectly collapsed stale, the best stallions were poorly patronized, and mares of finest form, the purest strain and most brilliant escutcheon were basely "prostituted to the force and ignoble embrasof the usinine ravisher."

An-gentleman of this county sold a short time ago year old mare mule for $400. But these are prices for fancy mnles; there is a small and or class of animals that are considered a sort of heads, and which the feeder won't buy if offerne, and these are ones usually found in service til forced by the scarcity and high price of the Kentuckians would not use mules. But the last few years they have become common when they get lazy and they will then take the lash "like a mule."

Persons who have tried them on their farms are better pleased with them they say, than they thought better pleased with them they say, than they thought they would be. They never get sick, rarely ever get lame, will do as much work as a horse which will cost twice as much money, and at the same time subsist on less and more inferior food, for a mule will work very well on wheat straw and corn shucks, whereas the horse must have grain as well as a good allowance of long food. They are better for our servants to handle, as they can stand neglect and violent treatment better than the horse, and a blemish, such as the loss of an eye, does not impair his value as much as that of the horse.

As to their temperament and peculiarities it is his value as much as that of the borse.

As to their temperament and peculiarities it is useless to say much; the world knows pretty much what it is. He is not so apt to run as the horse, but more apt to kick, viz: until broken. He is fond of company, is decidedly gregarious, and his attachments are quite as strong when once formed as those of the horse. It is almost impossible to confine one away from an associate. He will climb over the fence if practicable like a dog, or if more practicable creep through a crack, or worm himself under fence if practicable like a dog, or if more practica-ble creep through a crack, or worm himself under like a pig. An acquaintance of mine told me that he was in the habit of working a pair together, but on one occasion, wishing to use but one, he confined the other in a close stable, where as he thought he would be compelled to remain. But, on his return, he found, to his astonishment, that the perverse beast had accended into the hay loft, which enter-prising feat it had accomplished by first getting into the trough, and thence through the hole left for throwing the hay into the manger. THE HOG MARKET .- Mesers. Hull, Hunt, & C. killed their first lot of hogs yesterday. They numbered a few hundred only. The total killed around the falls up to this time is 5,000 and at Cincinnati 20,000. The killing in number is fully 75 per cent. behind any former year, and the season will doubtless be greatly prolonged.

As to prices, the few hogs that have come in had been previously contracted for; $5 cash for net weight could be obtained. In the country, buyers and sellers are at variance and very few transactions are taking place. We hear of two sales in Madison me 1.t of 350 head at $1 gross, 12 months without interest, and the other of 137 head at $4 gress, 12 mouths with interest from the 1st of February. Also, 5,000 head, very heavy, in a town near the Illinois river, at $4 net.

Prices at Cincianati are higher, yesterday's quo tations being $5 50 to $5 60. But the buyers there must have the hogs to fill November contracts.

The foreign news which was received early vesterday morning will have a tendency to depress the market. At St. Louis, on Friday, several hundred head were received on previous contract. The price paid for heavy hogs was $6 50, beyond which buyers were not disposed to go. The Madison Courier, of last evening, has the following:

O'Neill Bayly & Co. commenced the hog slaughtering and packing season at the Crooked creek house

Operations commenced this morning at the Mam-moth Cave.

We have heard of no sales; the hogs now in the pens are lots contracted for or upon which advances have been made. Packers here do not consider the few forced sales at Cincinnati, to fill contracts, a fair indication of the market. At Keokuk a perk-packing association has been remized, the object of which is, in the absence of currency, to purchase pork on the credit and paper of the company. About $200,000 has been subscribed, and more is expected. There is no money to buy with, and prices are unsettled. One firm was offering $3 50 per hundred.

At Nashville dealers were offering $4 to $5 netrather a wide range.

The Chattanooga (Tenn.) Advertiser, of the 19th,

From a recent lrip into the hog raising countries we learn that there are far more hogs in the country than was supposed a few months since—and that they will be heavily fatted as all will admitt when seeing the immense crops of corn in every portion of the State. In the early part of the season hogs were sold as high as 505½ cts., gro-s, whereas now those prices would not be given now for logs net. We learn that Messrs. Chandler & McCany have made purchases at 4½ net, and can buy any number

On the other hand, a Columbus (Gec.) paper savs: Hogs Scarce.-Would it not be well for Tennerrogs scarce.—Would it do be well or remereseens who are supplying the country north and east of us, to bring a portion of their logs to Columbus? Pork is slaughlering and selling here at ten cents net. It does seem to us that it ought to be sold in Columbus at 8 cents net and pay a good profit.

At Atlanta, Georgia, three pork houses have been set in operation. They are carried on by J. J. Thrasher, N. L. Angier, and Holland & Davis.

RASPBERRIES AND BLACKBERRIES -At a late RASPBERRIES AND BLACKEERRIES—At a late meeting, held in Rochester, of the Fruit Growers' Association of Western New York, Mr. Downing said the variety known as the Hudson River Antwerp was the only sort cultivated largely for the New York market. The product was from $300 to $500 per acre. Sold at wholesale at 10 cents a basket, and three baskets made a quart.

Mr. H. E. Hooker, at 10 cents a quart, found the yield here to be about $140 per acre. Had taken correct account of one bed containing 16 rods—one-tenth on an acre, and containing 135 hills, four feet apart each way. The product was 200 quarts, which, apart each way. The product was 200 quarts, which, at 12½ cents per quart, would be $25. Charging the cost of picking and marketing, manure and entivation, and cost of plants, use of land, &c., at fair prices, there was left a clear profit of $14 08 on this small piece of land.

Mr. Hogg seld over one hundred quarts, this sea-small piece of land.

Mr. Hoag sold over one hundred quarts this season at 16 cents. Brinckle's Orange is not only the best fruit but bears altogether the best crop. Mr. II. did not think it firm enough to bear carriage a great distance. The plant is hardy, though he found that when covered in winter a better crop is produced, and finer. The Hudson River Antwerp killed back nuless covered. Ellwanger, from many favorable reports re-from the West, was led to believe that Brinckle's Orange was better adapted to that locality than any other variety. Mr. Barry had no doubt but raspberries could be raised for six cents a quart, the Kentuckians would not use mules. But the last few years they have become common farm, pulling the plough and wagon, and ocally a clever pair is seen in the carriage; some m are pretty glib goers for an hour or two, they get lazy and they will then take the lash they give the property of the service of the service of the service will keep and bear carriage much better when gathered to the service of the s

Nathaniel Draper, of Rochester, had grown the Red and Yellow Autwerp on the same soil for twenty-five years. Used no manure during the time, but kept the weeds down and the canes tied to stakes. Never lost a crop, but plants taken from his beds and planted in highly manured soils have proved barren. Mr. Hooker and Mr. Hoag had noticed that high manuring was unfavorable to the production of fruit.

Mr. H. E. Hooker suggested that as there was now much interest felt in regard to the blackberry, it would be well for members to give their views in regard to its value, mode of cultivation, &c.

Mr. C. P. Bissell had an acre in cultivation. The regard to its value, mode of cultivation, &c. Mr. C. P. Bissell had an acre in cultivation. The young plants should have good roots. The first season, the branches spread on the g ound; the second and third years, throw np strong shoots. Should be planted in rows some eight feet apart, and about the same distance in the rows. For training, the best way is to set posts and run two wires from post to post, to which the bearing canes should be tied. In the spring cut the canes back to about five feet, and also shorten the laterals to five or six buds, or they become so heavy with the weight of fruit as to break from the cane. The blackberry fills a vacancy between raspberries and peaches. Had picked over 400 berries from one plant. After bearing is over the canes may be untied from the wires and allowed to fall by their own weight. When fully ripe the fruit was good, but persons often picked it before ripe.

Charles Hooker, of Rochester, said his plants were frozen back last winter; only the tops, however, were injured. It was difficult to tell when the fruit was ripe, as it was quite sour long after it travel black.

fruit was ripe, as it was quite sour long after it turned black.

fruit was ripe, as it was quite sour long after it turned black.

Mr. Hoag said the fruit should hang for several days after turning black. Picked several quarts of fine fruit last week.

Mr. Barry thought that from its tenderness it was as little calculated for shipment as the raspberry. The High Bush or Dorchester was of better flavor, firmer, and nearly or quite as large and productive. This at least was the character of the fruits as proved on their grounds.

This at least was the character of the fruits as proved on their grounds.

C. P. Bissell stated that several persons in his neighborhood had abandoned the Dorchester on account of its unproductiveness. Mr. Downing being called npon to give the convention the benefit of his experience with this fruit, stated that the New Rochelle or Lawton was the largest and bore the best crops; the Dorchester was sweeter and of better flavor, but hot so productive, and the Newman blackberry was sweeter than either, but not very productive.—Ohio Valley Farmer.

A CARD. We would respectfully call the attention of the public to a MARINE GERONOMETER placed in our window, showing the exact time. It is entirely of American manifeature, and has been exhibited at the World's Fair in Paris in competition with the best London and French Chronometers, and also at the World's Fair in New York, and in every instance has received the highest premium for unequalled workmanship and correctime-keeping.

highest fremlin for decident we have secured the services of Mr. El. Helwig, of New York. Mr. H. can execute any kind of watch-work fully equal to Jurgensen, Frodsham Adams, or any of the first London or Swiss makers.
